should be allowed more than six months' leave; if he be leaving the colony for a longer period he should be expected to resign his seat at the Council, and let his successor be appointed permanently, thus doing away with acting unofficial members. The same reform should also be extended to the appointments of unofficial members made by the Governor. With five unofficial soats at the Council and the frequent bolidays taken by members, there would be no necessity for the exclusion for any lengthened period of an exceptionally able or popular member, while the reform suggested would be fairer for all parties and admit of the introduction of more new blood Yaumati succeeded in rescuing two of the men, gives $14,400 per annum; in twelve years into our legislative body .--

TWO STRANGE ANIMALS. The Rev. J. E. Tennison-Woods, in his "Notes of travel," gives the following account of two ourious animals peopliar to the Indian Archipelago :-I must return now somewhat upon my foot ateps for the sake of briefly noticing two strange animals which are confined to so small a portion of the Archipelago, and are so exceptional in their structure that they stand apart, as it were from the zoology of these lands. The first these is the Babirusa (hogdeer). The Frence naturalist D'Orbigny gave us, it not the earliest certainly the most reliable notices of the strange creature. It is like a pig, with long slender legs; but it feeds on leaves and fruits, and does not rent. The tasks of the lower jaw are long and slender, directed upwards and curving cognisances in the sam of $25 each to be of good slightly. Those of the upper are also directe upwards, not like the usual tusks of pigs which grow downwards. These same upper tusks are set in long sockets, and they reach an inordinate length, sometimes eight or ten inches, curvit y backwards to the eyes. The female is without these teeth. The animal is, in short, a kind of wild boar with short hair, making it look bare, a thin skin, a slender head, and small eyes and ears. The tusks, which look very formidable, are almost useless for attack because of their curving over so much, hence it is easily captured. It is found all over Celebes, in the Scoloo group. a narrow strait from Amboyna, where, however, the babirusa lives not. H.M.S. almost inestimable quantity of jewels. Scindia's collection of diamonds, pearls, rubies, emerald. &c., is probably unique, and beyond the conception of even the fabled Aladdin. The native papers maintain that the Indian Princes are poor; but the case of the late Maharaja Scindia is cartainly not an example. ### VILRACTS.

EXPLORATION OF GREENLAND. Although the report that Nordenskjok intended to spend eighteen months in Antarctic exploration does not appear to have been well founded, says the New York Times, it is probable that the southern polar region will soon be visited by an exploring party. Sir Allen Young has offered to the Australian Colonies his services as leader of an expedition, and it is proposed that the enterprise shall be supported by grant of $40,000. Explorers will soon be at work in the Arctic region; Nosilof, who has spent three years in trying to find a practicable route from Northern Russia to Siberia. now intends to make a survey of the consts and interior of Nova Zembla. Before the end of the coming summer a expedition will be sent to the northeast coast of Greenland by Herr Gamic, under the direction of Lieutenaut Hovgaard, who commanded the Dimphna in 1882. The west coast of Greenland has been thoroughly explored, from Cape, Farawell through Smith Sound and Kennedy Channel to the point on the north shore reached by Lockwood and Brainard, of the Greely party, in 1881. ha northern part of the cast coast is sil to be traced. Two years ago the Dinish expedition, under Lieutenant Holm, explored the east coast from Cape Farewell to 66.20 north. The great masses of ice backed against the shore in January and February and throughout the spring months do not begin to disappear until June or July, so that the best season for exploration is the autumn and the early part of winter. While parigation is more difficult on the east coast, the land seems to be better fitted to sustain life than the region on the other side of the great island or paninsula. years ago Nordenskjold nenetrated the interior from a point near Disco Island on the west coast expecting to discover a large inland sea. He found no sea, but in its place a desert of ice. At a point 225 miles from the coast he reached an elevation of 7,000 feet. But the naturalist, Pansch, attached to the German expedition of 1869-70, had found a far more attractive region on the east coast and at a much higher latitude. Nordenskjold'sjourney was made in 69 deg., or 70 deg, north. Dr. Pansch and his associates reached the east coast in the vicinity of the Pendulum Telands, 5 deg. farthernorth. While Nordenskjold was repelled by ice, Pensch reported that the interior was free from snow, and that the soil supported rich and vigorous vegetation. There were green pastures at the foot of the mountains and on the alopes, while forms and alpine roses flourished in the clefts of the rocks.

There are many natives on the cast coast, and parties of them occasionally make fourners to the settlements on the northwest Scoresby found Esquimaux near the sound which bears his name. in 70 deg. north. The expedition to which 'Dr. Pansch was attached found huts at seven places 300. miles farther north, but they had been abundoned. Perhaps Lieutenant Hovgaard will discover the northern limit of Habitation.

A REMARKABLE MAN.

Sam Brewer, a half-breed Oherokee, who has both legs off above the ankles, his right arm off above the clow, and his left arm off about four inches below the elbow, is in attendance at the United States Court to answer three indictments for assault with intent to kill, his weapon of warfare being a Winchester rifle.

In one of the cases he acknowledges that he shot at a man named Phipps, and killed the borse he was riding, but claims be did it. in self-defence. The other two cases he declines to discuss, saying they will have to prove them on him.

Brower is certainly a remarkable man. He is 82 years old and has a wife and two children. He resides on a farm near Fort-Gibson, his principal occupation being that of a cowboy. He is an expert horseman and a good shot with a rifle. In handling a Winchester he works the hammer and trigger with the stump of his left arm, while with the stump of his right arm he manipulates the lever that throws the cartridges into the barrel of the gun from the magazine and the empty shells out. In eating he fastens a fork to the stump of his left arm and thus receives regular SPECIAL TELEGRAMS feeds himself. He writes a very good hand by fastening a pen to the stump of his right from Bombay, Madras, Galle, &c.; besides arm. His greatest inconvenience is in dressing and undressing himself. This he cannot do without assistance/instances of human endurance imaginable. He got on a spree one night at Fort Gibon a fleet borse, he made a good run and got out of town, but in doing so was shot through the left hand by the officers. The night was bitter cold and very dark; and as ran against a telegraph pole, and, Brewer's &c., &c., with the Punti and Mandarin Pronunhead coming in contact with it, he was knocked senseless. While lying unconscious by the readside a snowstorm came up, and hours after, when he regained consciousness, bis feet and hands were so hadly frozen that he could not move. There he remained until morning, when he was discovered and conveyed to his home. His limbs had to be amputated to save his life, and for a period hours :- This Time Table will take effect from of nine months he was confined to his room. He then took to horseback riding, and has sincs enjoyed good health.

He has a pair of wooden feet and ankles, the top of the latter being padded. Over these he draws a pair of long-legged boots made to order, and fastened to the feet by 1030 means of tacks. He draws the boot-legs over the stumps of his legs and straps them just below the knee, and is thus enabled to hobble around without the aid of crutch or cane. He can mount and dismount from a horse with apparently as much case as a man with his' natural limbs.

His life for the past fourteen years smacks of the desperado, and he is classed as one of the most dangerous men in his section. Notwithstanding the terrible condition to which he was brought by over-indulgence in strong to, except under unavoidable circumstances. In drink, he continues to use it to excess when case of stress of weather, due notice will be ever occasion offers.

He appears to be hapry and contented with bis hard lot, never complaining or lamenting over it. He has a fair education, and is an interesting and pleasant man to converse with when sober, but is extremely disagreeable FRESH when drunk. Notwithstanding his condition and his faults, he manages to make a fair support for his family, and apparently thinks much of them.

Hisapproaching trials on the grave charges THE CHUNG NGOL SAN PO of assault with intent to kill do not seem to worry him in the least. Taken as a whole, he is certainly a most remarkable specimen of humanity .- St. Louis Globe Democrat.

I suppose that FITHE Undersigned, Agents of the above Com- Antonio these actions had for their object the loosening of the claws and limbs in their sheathe; but at the time I feared that my lobster was in articulo mortis. The rapid movements somewhat disturbed the sand, clouding the water, but as the patient lay close to the glass I never entirely lost sight of him. Nevertheless, I do not quite know how it all occurred. The throes continued for an hour or more, and efforts were apparently made one to burst the shell open from within; but it was not until I saw that the lobsier had at Current Rates. netually divested himself of his bead-covering, including the stem-sheaths and outer corners of the eyes, that I understood what my guest was about. A great deal more wriggling and struggling followed; the lobster gra. THE LONDON ASSURANCE dually sque zing bimself, as it were, out of the shoulders of his auit of armour. The operation looked as if it were extremely painful and exhausting, and I more than once thought of offering assistance. But I did not interfere; and at last. The latter looked much the Policies at current rates, payable either here smaller of the two; and save that it was not in London, or at the principal Ports of India, tionless, it might have been mistaken for a China, and Australia. live and healthy crustacean in full dress. The orifice through which the ancient tenant had Policies issued for long or short periods at evicted himself was very small, and the beadsiece had not been completely thrown off but was left hanging as by a hinge. But the nownaked lobster did not look at all like his old self. His colours were so bright as to suggest that he had been parboiled, and he had the tender appearance of human flesh from which the skin has just been removed. When the lobster was given Rates. to me he was without his left big claw, which had, I suppose, been accidentally wrenched off by his original captor. The stump very quickly penied up, a hard, calcareous soal incrusting the end of the joint. To my astonishment, when the lobster worked himself out of his old shell he appeared with a rudimentary left claw, which had evidently formed behind the shield. This claw grew even more rapidly than the rest of the hody; and, by the time the new shell was bard, the new claw, though still disproportionate, was of very serviceable dimensions. I do not believe that the loss of a claw is a matter of much more moment to a lobater than it is to a crab. Sometimes, indeed, both lobsters and crabs appear to dismember themselves voluntarily. I have known a lebster to get one of his claws hopelessly, wedged in hetween the withes of a lobster-pot and leave it there in the most nonchalant manner
